Propose Opening Four Creeks to Fishermen

Hearing is scheduled in Columbia Falls Tuesday to gather public input on the possibility of opening four tributary streams in the North Fork to fishing.

Joe Huston, fishery biologist from the Kalispell office of the Montana Fish and Game Department will speak at 8 p.m. in the community room of the Glacier National Bank.

Under consideration is to open Big Creek, Trail Creek, Coal Creek and Whale Creek to fishermen from May 21 to July 4 this summer.

Fish and Game Department would then ask cooperation of fishermen who catch cutthroat trout which have been tagged in the Flathead River.

Reporting the location of the catch will help officials determine fish movement patterns. These four creeks have been closed for 20 years to protect Dolly Varden.

Otis Robbins, information officer for the fish and game department, said purpose of the public meeting Tuesday is for local fishermen to learn more about the project and to submit comments either for or against it.

The Montana Fish and Game Commission, Helena, will decide if the proposed opening of the four tributary creeks will become reality. Their meeting is scheduled April 28-29, said Robbins.
