

Forestry school receives gift

NEW HAVEN, Conn., — A gift of $100,000 has been made to the Yale School of Forestry and Environmental Studies by Burlington Northern, Inc., of St. Paul, Minn., and its subsidiary, Plum Creek Lumber Co. of Columbia Falls.

C. Robert Binger, president of Burlington Northern's Resource Division, pointed to the contribution that the Yale School can and should make to society through the education and training of professional natural resource managers.

"Private funds must be forthcoming to maintain the independence and vitality of this institution, one of only two private forestry schools in the nation. The expanding and vital role of natural resources in the economic and social well being of our society calls for unprecedented intensification and diversification of the role of the Yale School of Forestry and Environmental Studies," Binger said.

The gift was made in conjunction with The Campaign for Yale, the $370 million fund drive for the university.
